For players, the feature allows players to be immersed in more realistic gameplay by enabling a player to run at the speed of the ball or predict a defender's run from a tackle. For coaches, it's like receiving a personal game plan from a real-life player. "FIFA 22 has raised the bar for visual fidelity, but it was the introduction of 'HyperMotion Technology' that truly changed the game." FIFA 22 features the ability to sprint, it's the first time that sprint speed has been applied in-game. Players can sprint forwards, backwards, and sideways, and even change direction during a sprint. FIFA 22 introduces physics based progression. Players' attributes now have a direct impact on the game, and the game will favor the player that is more disciplined in his thinking and his best fits a scheme that is only in his reach. For example, a player that is more capable of covering the whole pitch might be more useful than a player that is more talented at dribbling. Players will now move with the ball or without it and considering the way players are moving in the real world, developing player intelligence, movement, and talents should generate greater skill in-game. "The more a player acts like a real footballer, the more accurate and more fun the game will be." FIFA 22 introduces several new features such as Run Creator, Run Creator II, Exploding Run, Attacking Entitlement, and Deep Positioning. In the game, you can create and edit your own runs, and you will be able to share your created runs with others. Additionally, you can transfer your runs to any other player on your team and you can even use the same run on a 'pass' to a teammate. FIFA 22 introduces 'Run Creator II.' This feature allows players to trigger a fake run on a pre-defined path. Players can even 'loop' a fake run. Run Creator II. has been introduced to the game to add more opportunities for creativity and innovation. In the game, you can use this feature to trick a defender into thinking that a pass is going to come from a specific area of the pitch, forcing the defender to move away from his position, allowing the attacker to run past him. In this new release, FIFA's proprietary Physically Based Rendering (PBR) engine brings new levels of realism, but the game's feel, play and gameplay still remain authentic and easy to master. With 60 players on the pitch at any one time, FIFA is home to six-on-six action. The intensity of this head-to-head gameplay is the foundation of EA SPORTS FIFA, and the game features a new trigger system which offers a more natural, intelligent and responsive experience. Along with the new trigger system, the game features an all-new "eXperience Engine" that delivers advanced visuals on and off the pitch, including dynamic lighting, advanced player collision and animations, player damage to name a few. It's FIFA like you've never seen it before. More than just a score board, FIFA's variety of game modes and responsive artificial intelligence have been enhanced throughout the game's modes and mechanics. Improvements have been made to the all-new "Ultimate Team" and "MyClub" modes, while "The Journey" experience and "Career" mode has been revamped, featuring the new "Edge of the Box" match engine and "player match-ups". For the first time, FIFA delivers a match engine that is even more intelligent and intuitive to play. Now the player can experience the game from all angles and read the game and react more naturally to the in-game events. The game modes in FIFA have also been vastly improved and evolved to provide fans with a comprehensive game that delivers an authentic feeling of the sport. The Board cites Act No. 499 of the 1975 Public Acts, which amends § 9-252.1 of the School Code to require schools to provide insurance coverage in an amount not to exceed $250,000 for a single occurrence for each individual pupil enrolled in school, and to obtain "unlimited" coverage of a district in whole or in part.
