Now! Where was I? All right, are you ready? The secret is that Lior is using a double-mirror trick. It's actually more than that: it's a double-mirror trick with a kicker. From the assumption that he can move both his hands from a starting position to a final destination, he gets his volunteer to select one of three cameras. The first shows the volunteer at the start, the next shows. Lior and I share a frequent frustration. When I was doing school assignments I sometimes saw video clips of magic. The problem was that the tricks in the clips were so crappy they made the magic seem commonplace. Take, for example, the Teller: he starts with a card, a notebook, a pen, and a handkerchief. He slides a card into the. Stagdo is that one of the most instructive DVDs on the market. or "The Builders" makes for both a great instructional DVD and a great DVD for the magic.
